

In case you haven't noticed, I have published a new blog section called MFA Thesis. This will be a place where I will document the process of creating my thesis installation for my MFA at MICA. I plan to post scans of my notebook and drawings and as well you can view all of the source code for this project at the repository on GitHub. This art project will be completely open source! Now i just need to make it.

Additionally, I am now using a Wordpress for Joomla plugin that will allow me to be a better blogger and to create more sections on this site in the future. Please bear with me as I move all of the current blog content over to the new system.